International Marine Biotechnology Conference '91

October 13-16, 1991
Stouffer Harborplace Hotel
Baltimore, Maryland USA

Announcing ...

The First International Marine Biotechnology Conference (IMBC '89) in Tokyo, Japan in Sept. 1989 was organized by the Japanese Society for Marine Biotechnology. The Tokyo conference was a highly acclaimed success, and IMBC '91 should prove to be an equally exciting event. IMBC '91 will serve all those interested in marine biotechnology—from academic scientists to technologists to policy-makers. The event will focus on new breakthroughs in science, industrial applications, commerce and international policy issues of marine biotechnology. The technical presentations will consist of invited papers and poster sessions.

Organized by the Society for Industrial Microbiology, IMBC '91 is co-sponsored by:

American Chemical Society, American Society for Microbiology, Center of Marine Biotechnology, Maryland Biotechnology Institute, Department of Agriculture, State of Maryland, International Scientific Committee for Biotechnology, International Union of Biochemistry, Israel Oceanographic and Limnological Institute, Hopkins Marine Station, Stanford University, Japanese Society for Marine Biotechnology, Maryland Agriculture Experiment Station, Maryland Sea Grant College, National Association of Marine Laboratories.
